Student-run Firm Handbook

2016–2017

Public Relations Student Society of America

July 2016

Dear PRSSA Member:

Congratulations on your interest in student-run firms. Student-run firms have been a part of PRSSA professional development for many years and their role has not only been to serve clients but to provide a way for students to advance their experience within the profession. With passion and dedication from firm members and leaders, student-run firms will continue to be a successful and important attribute of the Society.

This handbook serves to guide your firm experience. Whether you are starting a new student-run firm or are well established, refer to this handbook for advice, as well as examples and samples from a variety of schools across the nation. All guidelines listed here for a successful firm, will help you achieve standards of professionalism, structure and connections that will lead your firm to (or help your student-run firm renew) National Affiliation.

Nationally Affiliated firms are the most prestigious and successful firms in the Society. Achieving this status will give your firm access to PRSSA's client referral system and the opportunity to apply for the Student-run Firm Awards. For these reasons, I highly recommend becoming National Affiliated and applaud those who successfully applied. The full application for National Affiliation and information on the awards are listed near the end of this handbook and on the PRSSA website.

If your Chapter would like additional copies of this manual, you may download them at www.prssa.prsa.org. If you prefer to have copies mailed to you, contact Executive Director Jeneen Garcia at (212) 460-1474 or jeneen.garcia@prsa.org.

Much like the handbook, my role is to serve as a guide to your firm experience and to assist your firm in achieving set goals. I am always here for questions and would be happy to discuss individual struggles or accomplishments, no matter how big or small. I look forward to an exciting year and working with you to ensure the success of PRSSA's student-run firms.

All my best,

Elizabeth Skeele

2016–2017 Student-run Firm Handbook

What Is a Student-run Firm?

A PRSSA student-run firm is an operational public relations firm managed by PRSSA members. Firms allow you to gain hands-on experience with business-to-client relationships. The advantages of participating in a firm include the following:

- Building client relationships and meeting professionals.
- Learning how to lead and work as a team.
- Creating résumé/portfolio material.
- Getting hands-on public relations experience.
- Developing PRSSA Chapter unity.
- Learning to balance tasks and handle numerous duties.
- Applying theories learned in the classroom.

Beginning a student-run firm may seem daunting. As you consider how to start, remember that successful businesses did not begin perfectly, but with determination. For student-run firms, your hard work cannot be underestimated.

When launching a student-run firm, keep the following principles in mind:

- Start small. While you might have plenty of interest in the firm, it is much easier to manage and learn from mistakes with a small group of clients and employees.
- When working with clients, confirm everything in writing. Maintaining contracts is an important way to align the firm's and client's goals and expectations. Know what public relations is and help your clients understand it too. Public relations isn't necessarily putting up fliers, passing out coupons or making a Twitter account. Be strategic so your firm gets as much out of the relationship as your client does.
- Set a professional atmosphere so your employees will take the firm seriously. It's easier to maintain a professional setting than to try to regain one after it has been lost.

Build Your Team

When choosing executives, always pick trustworthy individuals who will be committed in the face of difficulties. With these people, you can effectively manage a firm.

Though student-run firms are organized within a PRSSA Chapter, they require their own student administrators to support their initiatives. Firms must have effective leaders to ensure stability and longevity. A small student-run firm may choose to have only a firm director, an assistant firm director and an account executive or two; whereas, a larger firm may have a full board of officers. The positions and titles should accommodate the needs and numbers of your firm staff. Remember to make sure your structure meets the standards set forth for National Affiliation if your firm wishes to apply for the designation (see section on National Affiliation).

PRSSA recommends the following positions (with multiple members holding the position, if appropriate):

- Firm Director
- Assistant Firm Director or Vice President
- Department Director
- Account Executive

- Public Relations Director
- Administrative Assistant
- Finance Director
- Staff Member

Depending on the size and structure of your firm, you may require more, fewer or some combination of these positions. National Affiliation standards recommend you have at least one firm director and two assistant directors.

Firm Director

The firm director is responsible for managing the firm's operations and serves on the Chapter's PRSSA executive board to maintain communication between firm and Chapter. The firm director should have regularly scheduled meetings with staff and weekly meetings with officers. Be sure to include time for questions from the account executives. Duties may include the following:

- Select account executives with the help of the assistant firm director or vice president.
- Maintain on-going contact with the firm, Faculty and Professional Advisers.
- Conduct leadership and general firm meetings.
- Maintain files of all activities.
- Oversee and approve client recruitment.
- Evaluate and motivate firm members.
- Establish communication between the firm and the rest of the Chapter.
- Maintain contact with clients and account executives to ensure satisfactory progress.
- Offer commitment and professionalism to the firm and its activities.

Assistant Firm Director or Vice President

The assistant firm director (or vice president) plays an important role in helping the director oversee the firm's leadership and relationships. Duties may include the following:

- Assist director on all projects and activity planning.
- Supervise all accounts and maintain file of activities.
- Recruit and maintain clientele.
- Assist, advise and evaluate executives during meetings and report to firm director (or president).
- Perform director's duties in his or her absence.

Department Director

A department director is responsible to ensure the quality level of all firm projects and oversee students in the department. If the agency is large, then it is wise to categorize students by the work they produce and then assign them to projects as they come, rather than assigning them to participate on a certain client team. Duties may include the following:

- Assign students to client projects based on experience and expertise.
- Provide constructive criticism and mentor students in the department.
- Maintain regular communication with Account Executives
- Regular meet with students to review work.
- Provide final approval on projects prior to delivery to the client.

Account Executive
Account executives are often the main client contact. The account executive must be professional, responsible and ethical because he or she represents the firm. National Affiliation standards recommend a firm should have at least two account executives. Account executives should report consistently to the firm's executive board through written and oral reports. This ensures that the client is well-served and that all associates are participating. Duties may include the following:
- Develop goals and objectives with his/her account members.
- Obtain client permission to implement tactics.
- Motivate account members with phone calls and email reminders.
- Maintain regular communication with the client.
- Complete a detailed weekly activities report.
- Maintain a continuous and complete file of activities and completed projects.

Administrative Assistant
An administrative assistant records the firm's meeting minutes and assists with client relations, thank you letters and firm social events. Duties may include the following:
- Record attendance at all meetings.
- Create email list server for all members to receive minutes and other notifications.
- Assist officers with various firm activities.

Public Relations Director
The public relations director builds relationships and support for the firm among its key audiences. Duties may include the following:
- Create a publicity committee to promote the firm and motivate others to join.
- Develop fliers, letterhead, letters and newsletter for the firm.
- Disseminate news to local media about upcoming and successful client events.
- Assist president to creatively recognize achievements for firm members.
- Research and implement volunteer events and donation opportunities for the firm.

Finance Director
The finance director keeps accurate, updated expense records and ensures adequate funds are available for campaigns. He or she is strongly encouraged to work with an Adviser to reduce liability. Duties may include the following:
- Assist president in preparing annual plans, budgets, proposals and histories.
- Ensure appropriate resources are available for account executives.
- Research, design and implement fundraising.

Staff Members
Fill these positions with PRSSA members first, then solicit the service of student freelancers, consultants or accountants. Staff members are responsible for maximizing their own experience, under the direction of the account executives. Duties may include the following:
- Submit regular report forms to account executives.
- Actively participate in account activities.

Officer Training

You must train your team in the firm’s operations and procedures. Training can be as simple as holding officer meetings, providing a handbook or hosting a retreat. Your Advisers may assist. The firm should send at least one individual to the PRSSA National Conference each year to attend the workshop specifically for student-run firms, as well as professional development sessions and networking opportunities.

Public relations skills that can be practiced in your firm include:

- Research — Focus groups, surveying, evaluation techniques, interviewing
- Business — Budgeting, proposals, presentations, management function
- Media relations — News releases, press kits, media pitching, radio and television spots
- Design — Publicity (newsletters, brochures), photography, special, desktop publishing
- Writing — Feature stories, op-ed pieces, speech writing, strategic plans
- Web development — Copy design, graphics design, forms handling
- Event planning — Fundraising, campaign planning, goal setting, multi-tasking

Good Management Practices

Management involves planning, setting goals and making decisions. Officers are responsible for the business and influence its success. Management encompasses the following:

- Planning — Setting the goals and strategies for your firm.
- Organizing — Deciding on tasks, delegating, scheduling, etc.
- Staffing — Hiring, training, and terminating (if necessary) employees.
- Directing — Supervising and motivating employees.
- Controlling — Evaluating how you are achieving your goals and reacting accordingly.

Recruiting members

Seek publicity to recruit new members. Modes of publicizing include the following:

- Create a firm newsletter or regular spot in the Chapter newsletter.
- Send a press release or pitch to the school newspaper.
- Develop fliers to post around campus or give out at special events.
- Start a publicity committee or offer the firm as a class for credit.
- Invite public relations students to an opening social, such as a barbecue.
- Create awards for students who demonstrate an outstanding effort in the firm.
- Announce the firm in public relations and business classes.
- Feature a link to the firm website on the Chapter website.

Structure

Organization Chart

Firms should have a documented structure similar to a professional firm's to guide all organizational activities. The structure should accommodate each firm's resources and circumstances. The following is a sample organization chart for a student-run firm.

A student who provides short-term specialty advice on a campaign or project.

Name

Whether you choose a name that is simple, urbane or associated with your college, make sure it will grow with your firm. Involve all firm members in brainstorming and choosing. A good firm name is easy to remember, distinctive, professional and indicates your business.

Logo and Tagline

The logo and tagline should be carefully developed symbols of the business. See examples from Anderson University, Drexel University, Ohio University, University of Nebraska Omaha, University of Oregon and University of Texas at Austin.

Mission Statement

A mission statement clarifies the firm's goals, sets expectations for members, and shows clients you are organized and focused. Good mission statements are brief and memorable.

The following is an example mission statement from Edelman:
"To provide public relations counsel and strategic communications services that enables our clients to build strong relationships and to influence attitudes and behaviors in a complex world.

- "We undertake our mission through convergence by integrating specialist knowledge of practices and industries, local market understanding, proprietary methodology and breakthrough creativity."
- "We are dedicated to building long-term, rewarding partnerships that add value to our clients and our people."
- "Our clients are leaders in their fields who are initiating change and seeking new solutions."

Vision

One of your first and most important decisions is when responsibility for the firm will transition to new leaders. To make this decision, firm leaders should review the National Affiliation standards and envision how the firm will operate after it has met each standard. Set semester- and year-long goals, and let the goals dictate when leadership changes.

Goals

Have an organized strategic plan, with research, action, communication and evaluation sections (see RACE, p. 11). Periodically, re-evaluate goals with your Faculty and Professional

Advisers. Goals help indicate if your firm is valuable to staff and clients. They provide a focus for officers, whose goals and projects should complement. The following are example goals:

- Increase firm [membership or clients] by [quantity] during [semester, year, etc.].
- Create a firm portfolio or sample press kit by [date].
- Increase awareness of our firm by [percent] compared to last year's awareness survey.
- Gain National Affiliation by [semester, year, etc.].

Objectives

Objectives for a new firm may include establishing strong leadership, obtaining clients, developing a strong network and increasing membership. When setting objectives, consider the demands on the firm and how the firm can benefit current and future members.

Policies

Specific policies are necessary for crisis and problem resolution. All members should receive a copy of the firm policies. Consider including the following:

Conduct

- Behavior policy and dress code
- Customer relations policy
- Conflicts of interest policy
- Confidentiality policy
  PRSA/PRSSA Code of Ethics
- Dispute resolution policy
- Travel and automobile usage policy
- Community participation policy

Personnel Responsibilities

- Employment agreements
- Orientation and training
- Hiring and firing policy
- Personnel records policy
- Pay and reimbursement policies
- Equal Employment Opportunity policy
- Suggestion policy
- Employee relations policy

Firm Operations

Firm Activities

- Officers should conduct regular meetings with all staff.
- Account executives should meet regularly with account staff.
- Hold workshops to help members learn about topics not discussed in classes.
- Hold regularly scheduled client meetings or calls and distribute minutes.
- Complete all client services as promised and submit regular client reports.
- Allow clients to evaluate the firm annually.

As The Firm Grows

- Offer a brochure to local businesses, restaurants and shops.
- Develop and practice a presentation to give to potential clients.
- Establish billing rates and methods.
- Apply for National Affiliation when requirements are met.

Interviewing Potential Firm Members

- Sincerely welcome every applicant. Be enthusiastic and friendly.
- Share your commitment to the firm and the benefits of participating.
- Ask about the applicants' experience, expectations and commitments.

Business Pitfalls

You can avoid many of the following pitfalls by planning ahead and seeking help:

- Incomplete records
- No marketing strategy
- Poor management
- Hiring the wrong people
- Poor customer service
- Unwilling to ask for help

Proper Records

Records are the most important management tool you possess and ensure future members' success. Keep your records simple. Track the following information:

- Inventory
- Client contacts
- Petty cash and payroll
- Suppliers
- Employee data
- Mileage
- Telephone calls
- Accounts payable and invoices

Recruiting Clients

Research possible clients that need the type of work you want to do. If your campus is not near a large community, look within your school for possible clients.

- Visit campus organizations.
- Promote at campus events.
- Distribute brochures and fliers.
- Contact local new businesses.
- Announce the firm at a PRSA meeting.
- Contact previous employers.
- Advertise in a PRSA Chapter newsletter.
- Volunteer or fundraise for a nonprofit (see Pro-

Once you have a list of potential clients, send a personalized letter to each introducing the firm. Follow up with a call to arrange a meeting to present a proposal and contract.

Managing Contracts and Campaigns

Contracts

Contracts are vital to your student-run firm. A contract aligns your expectations and abilities with those of the client and provides documentation of the conditions of your work. See the sample contract at the end of this handbook. Your contract should include the following:

- Client's list of anticipated projects including priorities and tentative schedule.
- Conditions of accepting new projects not listed on original contract.
- Times like finals and holiday breaks that will affect productivity of firm members.
- Minimum amount of work or projects to deter inactive clients (when necessary).
- Billing information and conditions, including out-of-pocket expenses.
- Conditions for termination and canceled projects.
- Conditions of keeping samples of printed or published work as portfolio samples.

Campaigns

A successful public relations campaign starts with understanding your client's needs. Campaign planning includes the following:

- Research your client, the opportunity or problem, your audiences.
- Determine objectives with a focus on impact and output.
- Plan your theme, actions, media targets and what constitutes effective communication.
- Evaluate the impact and output of your objectives.

First Client Meeting

Prepare for client meetings by writing an agenda. Be sure to ask the following:

- What are the client's needs?
- What are the client's goals?
- What are our goals?
- What do their competitors offer?
- What is their budget?
- Do their needs match your services?
- What have they done in the past?
- Does the client understand the contract?
- Who is the client contact?
- What is the timeframe?

Discuss and agree upon your evaluation of "good public relations." How do you want to evaluate the outcome? Manage the client's expectations up front, before any work begins.

Brainstorming

Brainstorming is a creative group problem-solving technique. Members may suggest any solution to a problem. The following tips will help you run a group brainstorming session:

- Define your problem clearly.
- Define the criteria of success.
- Stay focused.
- Don't stay on any idea too long.
- Encourage everyone to contribute.
- Let people have fun brainstorming.
- Do not allow criticism. It stifles creativity.
- Appoint one person to take notes.

RACE formula

When planning a campaign you should systematically use the Research, Action, Communication and Evaluation model, or a similar system, to meet the clients' needs. The RACE model has the following 10 defined components:

- Objectives and goals
- Strategy
- Activity
- Evaluation
- Executive timeline
- Problem or opportunity statement
- Situation Analysis and Primary Focus
- Budget

Developing a Business Network

Effective business networking provides you and your firm with relationships that could become business. Remember that networking should be based in a genuine interest in helping others. Friends and supporters are just as important in business as they are in your personal life. They will educate and guide you. Your network should include the following people:

- Community leaders
- Business owners
- Campus administration
- PRSSA alumni and PRSA members
- Champions for PRSSA
- College/University faculty and staff

Pro-Bono Professional Development

When starting your firm, finding clients willing to pay for your services may be difficult. Pro-bono work is a great way to build your firm portfolio and attract larger clients. Additionally, pro-bono work unites firm members around a meaningful cause and assists your firm's reputation. Even if your firm is well-established, pro-bono work is a great way to implement new campaigns, explore another sector of public relations and discover causes you are passionate about.

Pro-bono work is done for free. You may consider working for local nonprofits. By presenting strategies to increase their donor or volunteer base, you will add to your portfolio, execute a successful campaign and earn an invaluable client recommendation. Before you begin pro-bono work, be sure the client understands that your work extends beyond casual volunteer duties.

When choosing a client to assist, consider what you want to accomplish. Perform a strength, weakness, opportunity and threat (SWOT) analysis for the organization to guide your campaign planning. If you are already familiar with the organization's needs, they will be more confident in your counsel. Discuss your ideas for them and if they consent, you have your first client.

Use the guidelines found in this handbook for your pro-bono client, as for any other client. Remember that your initial clients are your best advocates when securing new business.

Strong Support System

Every firm needs a strong support system so secure advisers as soon as possible. National Affiliation requires firms to have at minimum a Faculty Adviser and Professional Adviser. Other advisers may include the following:

- Community leaders
- Other business professionals
- Alumni
- Champions for PRSSA
- PRSA Chapter members
- Other faculty

While advisers' first responsibility is to uphold the firm's quality, they should attend meetings and counsel the firm leaders on clients, recruitment, projects, finances, contracts and evaluations. The adviser should be familiar with clients and staff.

Connecting with Your Chapter

While a student-run firm and a PRSSA Chapter are separate operations, a strong and mutually beneficial connection should be maintained between both groups. Ideally, an overlap should exist between Chapter members and firm members. To improve your firm's connection with your local PRSSA Chapter, consider implementing the following:

- Invite all Chapter members to attend a firm status meeting or workshop.
- Provide firm updates and announcements at E-Board meetings.
- Foster collaboration on National initiatives.
- Encourage Chapter members to support the firm by sharing its goals, such as gaining National Affiliation.

Finances

A firm's finances can be handled internally or by a financial manager, but either way, recordkeeping is vital. Records to maintain include the following:

- Inventory Log
- Accounts Receivable and Payable
- Payroll Log
- Telephone Log
- Mileage, Travel & Entertainment Log
- Weekly Income/Sales Journal

A paper recordkeeping system may work for a small firm, but eventually you may need computer software. A large firm may need to hire a fiscal manager to handle invoices, receipts, time cards and taxes. To avoid ethical problems, require signatures from your firm director and Faculty Adviser, and release funds to only one designated person.

Billing

Determine if and how much you are going to charge clients. Many student-run firms don't charge until they gain experience. Check if your school's campus regulations allow you to charge. Clients will pay for quality work. Your fees may vary if the client is a nonprofit or depending on the experience of firm members. You may want to base your hourly rate on what local interns earn. The firm officers, counseled by advisers, should make billing decisions.

To gain experience with billing, consider "fake billing." Prepare an invoice clearly marked "NO CHARGE." Include all information that would be listed on an actual invoice.

All fees must be stated in the contract. When setting prices, consider your operation costs, what the competition is charging and research into market standards. The following are three common methods of charging clients for firm services:

- Retainer Fee — A fixed fee for unlimited services over a period of time.
- Special Project Fee — A fee charged per service or product provided.
- Hourly Billing — A fee charged per hour worked. Your contract should include a predetermined monthly minimum and maximum. The firm is responsible to deliver its services within that range. Include a list of accomplished tasks in the invoice.

The financial manager is responsible for keeping an accurate budget and financial record. You also need to determine how firm income will be used. Often, it should be used to expand and improve the firm, rather than being directed for general Chapter use.

Proposal

The firm and client should agree on a proposal before any work is performed. The proposal should list the services you'll provide, supplies needed, reimbursable costs and client fees. If additional services are requested, draft a separate contract to prevent misunderstandings.

Corporate Sponsorship

Many times, companies looking to benefit their communities will donate funds to hire you for a nonprofit. Be sure to examine the criteria and terms when applying for these grants.

Evaluation

An effective evaluation process measures the firm's performance and identifies areas of improvement. The evaluation should answer the firm's goals and provide insight for future firm members. Maintaining thorough, accurate records of evaluations is vital. Each firm member should keep a portfolio of all projects for use as an evaluation and employment tool. Clients should complete an evaluation at the end of each semester or project. This feedback will show how the firm could improve and can be used in recruiting future clients.

The Faculty Adviser or firm director should conduct a three-minute interview with each member yearly, though a firm may benefit from having account executives conduct more frequent reviews. This interview should not be extensive but should mimic a professional annual review, focusing on client benefits and results, rather than methods or tactics.

Reports should accommodate the firm's needs. Consistency is vital to ensure the client is well served and all associates are participating. The following are suggested reports a firm should maintain, and samples can be found at the end of this handbook:

- Account Executive Sign-off and Weekly Activity Reports
- General Membership Application, Staff Evaluation and Portfolio
- Client Pitch Letter, Proposal and Contract
- Client Final Report and Evaluation Questionnaire

Your annual report should include a brief description of the year's projects and may include as an addendum copies of the firm's products. The PRSSA National Annual Report, on www.prssa.org, can be used as a sample.

Conclusion

Recognition and Evaluation

As the academic year comes to a close, recognize and evaluate the individuals who contributed to your firm's success. Hold a final meeting or social to review the firm's accomplishments. Spotlight each account or project and display some of the work. Give awards such as outstanding account coordinator, team or new member. Consider giving all participants a certificate. This motivates members and shows their contribution is valued. Apply for Student-run Firm Award for "Best Campaign" or "Best Tactic," or enter PRSSA's Dr. F.H. Teahan Chapter Awards Program in the "Best Firm" category, which adds to your credentials and validates your firm's excellence to clients, potential employers and peers.

Appreciation

Thank the clients that provided you work opportunities and the advisers who helped the firm grow. Send letters of appreciation or consider having a client appreciation social. Maintain contact with clients over the summer months (summer conditions may be part of the contract). Clients need to know when vacations or finals will terminate or temporarily delay work on their projects. Include these dates and times in your firm-client contract.

Questions and Answers

What is a good way for new firms to find new clients? This is a great place to utilize your Chapter's relationship with your sponsor PRSA Chapter. They can help with networking for potential clients or may even use your firm themselves. You can also search for opportunities within your school with other departments, clubs or organizations.

What if an account group is struggling to communicate with its client? Choose one point person, usually the account executive, to contact the client. If the client is difficult to reach, the account group may want to establish a specific method and time to correspond.

How do firm members become familiar with the client? Staff should research the client and prepare questions for the first meeting. Visit the company if appropriate, and if it is a nonprofit, volunteer to help. You may also consider inviting the client to a reception held by the firm.

What should we do if our firm has too many or too few members? If there are too many members, try to secure more clients or set higher participation criteria. If there are too few members, reduce your number of accounts/projects by not renewing contracts. Another possibility is to establish the firm as a class for students to commit at least for one semester.

What if our members lose interest in our student-run firm? Try securing an exciting account that offers a more diverse experience. Remind students that they can expand their portfolio, gain leadership experience and earn awards. Obtain feedback through surveys and talk to your advisers. To avoid this problem in the first place, ensure that you are utilizing all members of your firm. Don't use the same people repeatedly while leaving others out. If you have a member that is particularly good at something, pair him or her with a less experienced member for a project as a way to facilitate a relationship and encourage participation.

How can we increase attendance at firm meetings? Incorporate something fun, like a quiz or prizes, at all general meetings. Consider making this an on-going competition that will require members' attendance and participation.

How can we increase membership? Recruiting is usually easiest at the beginning of the semester. Set up an information table at events or talk to communications professors about the firm. However, size does not indicate success; members in a small firm may have more ownership and take on more projects.

How do we raise awareness of the firm? You must know how to market your firm before you can market clients. If awareness is a problem, take on fewer projects and spend more time on building the firm's name and image. Create a website or promotional materials. Further, try to combine your promotional efforts with those of your PRSSA Chapter. Speak to incoming freshmen, share information during related classes and place bookmarks in textbooks prior to the start of the semester in order to keep your firm at the top of students' minds.

Student Case Studies

Case Study One: Forest Park

Cardinal Communications, Ball State University's student-run public relations and advertising agency in Muncie, Ind., works for Forest Park, a local senior center. The agency has worked with Forest Park for three years and helped rename the center from Forest Park Senior Citizens Center to Forest Park Senior Center.

Goal

Cardinal Communications' goal was to feature Forest Park's activities, mission, history and classes. All suggestions and approvals for Forest Park went through a board of directors that allowed all parties to have a say in the development of the centers new identity. Materials and logos were critiqued many times before the final identity was developed.

Result

Projects that Cardinal Communications developed for Forest Park included:

- Name change from Forest Park Senior Citizens Center to Forest Park Senior Center.
- Design, photographed, wrote content and produced a new logo.
- Designed and produced print advertisements that appeared in local Muncie papers.
- Wrote scripts and produced radio advertisements highlighting specific activities at the Center, which aired on local Muncie radio stations.
- Designed, photographed, wrote and laid out the www.fpseniorcenter.com website. Advertising the center in another avenue to its targeted audiences.
- Defined the target audience, allowing the center to market to potential users.
- Produced a promotional video that is shown at special events and on cable access channel 42. The video features aspects of the center that best represent Forest Park.
- Designed a new letterhead and business cards.
- Forest Park, a not-for-profit, has limited funding. Cardinal Communications researched and wrote community grants to help improve the center.
- Sent weekly press releases announcing new and upcoming activates occurring at Forest Park in attempt to gain extra media attention and exposure for the center.

Case Study Two: Ride for World Health

The PRactice is a student-run public relations firm at The Ohio State University. Our mission is to create a professional environment for students to excel and learn skills pertaining to the public relations industry. The National Affiliated firm provides solutions for local and national clients involving social media, event planning, design, marketing and traditional public relations. Being run by students, the firm creates an innovative and fresh look to any campaign. For this particular campaign The PRactice worked with Ride for World Health (R4WH), a nonprofit organization that rides a cross-country bike ride in order to raise money for domestic and global health issues, while advocating for improved access to care for underserved populations in the United States and all over the world. The organization's 2013 beneficiaries are Village Health Works, and Empower & Advance; two organizations working toward a better future for community health. R4WH uses a cross-country, 3,700 mile bike ride to deliver a coast-to-coast lecture series, speaking to audiences of all ages about health and wellness.

Research

After consulting with the R4WH staff and the previous year's PRactice members assigned to this account, the six, current members assigned to this team looked into ways the client could maximize their media coverage and efforts. Unhappy with the previous amount of coverage they had received, the client expressed their interest in seeking media attention from both magazines and newspapers relevant to their cause. With this, the PRactice researched general public newspapers and magazines while also looking at different health, fitness, biking and charity publications. After compiling a list of the publications the R4WH team would pitch to, the members of the PRactice assigned to this account began looking at the traditional layouts of these publications and noted how to create their articles to showcase the same look. Also, by analyzing how often the previous team pitched stories to different media outlets, a calendar was created on the different times of year that had previously attained the most media coverage.

Planning & Execution

The team of six PRactice members on this account focused their efforts on a large-scale, media relations campaign centered on the riders and the organization, in order to create awareness of the organization and its purpose and promote fundraising to R4WH's cause. By researching and contacting different media outlets in the various cities visited on the R4WH bike ride tour, the team focused on achieving widespread media coverage throughout the country. After the target audiences of health, fitness and human interest readers were identified each member of the team was given the chance to develop promotional materials, content and press releases to be sent out. All of these items were utilized to create a comprehensive media kit for R4WH, which included a press release, fact sheet, 2013 beneficiaries description, media contact list and bike route chart.

Recognizing that this organization not only needed to gain attention and support for its cause, but to reach crucial fundraising goals, the members of this team strategized the best mediums of communication for the audiences most likely to donate back. With this, the idea to create a magazine article to submit to news outlets for publication was planned. After the graphics and copy were developed for the magazine article it was decided by the team to pitch it to media outlets in the Tulsa, OK. This area was chosen to coincide with the promotional tactics and brochure the team was developing for the Global Health Fair R4WH was participating in at Oklahoma State University.

To create online awareness of the organization and its' purpose while promote fundraising to R4WH's cause, constant efforts were made to stay relevant through consistent, social media content and live-tweeting events. The members assigned to this team all drafted content to be used on the R4WH Facebook and Twitter accounts, which were given to the R4WH staff to post. As they saw the importance in having R4WH become a trending topic on Twitter, they drafted tweets for each segment of the race to encourage the same in the participants. Through the various promotional materials developed for the race segments, the team also suggested to the R4WH staff to include encouragement for live-tweeting participation.

Results

As a result of the content produced by the team of six PRactice members assigned to this client, four articles on R4WH have been written and published by reporters throughout the country, with more articles currently in the works. The original copy and graphics the team developed for a magazine article (see attached) will be published in Tulsa area publications this coming May. In February, our own campus newspaper, The Lantern, published a story on R4WH, including event coverage for the “Let’s go Ride a Bike” concert. With all of these publications combined, R4WH received coverage to a national audience in their target markets of health, fitness and human interest.

Case Study Three: Sh.I.P. Happens, It’s a Real Life Saver!
Following the attack on the World Trade Center in September 2001, students at West Virginia State University (WVSU) felt particularly insecure and vulnerable due to their campuses close proximity to chemical plants. Members of a Communication 205 class (Intro to Public Relations) discussed WVSU’s Emergency Response Plan and realized that few in the class knew of the plan. A total of seven students in a class of 43 actually knew what to do and where to go on campus to be safe. The class hypothesized that their lack of emergency knowledge was typical of the 5,000+ University family and expressed their desire to improve the situation. The first order of business: to research the emergency response-knowledge of WVSU. The students developed a survey instrument to implement among the WVSU student body, faculty and staff. Five hundred surveys were distributed, which represented roughly 10% of WVSU enrollment.

Research
Results of the survey revealed that more than 50% of those surveyed (students, staff, faculty) did not know what to do or where to go during a shelter in a drill, let alone an actual emergency. Following a news conference releasing the results of the research, class teams and PRSSA members were assembled to develop objectives, design logos and slogans and an initial plan for the campaign. The competition was intense, but the class consensus was for the team that developed the slogan “Sh.I.P. Happens, It’s a Real Lifesaver (Sh.I.P. is an acronym for Shelter in Place). The logo is of a ship’s life preserver and following the post 9-11 patriotism, the colors chosen were red, white and blue.

The WVSU PRSSA Chapter began implementation of the campaign during the fall semester. A WVSU calendar of events was obtained and planning was begun to correlate "Sh.I.P." activities with already scheduled events in order to reach the maximum number of primary and secondary audiences identified by the previous semester's research.

Planning & Execution

On March 13, 2002, a pitch was made to public relations representatives and safety planners from the local chemical industry for financial support in producing a video about Shelter in Place for WVSU students. Within 10 working days, word was received that a check for the $5,000 requested to produce the video would be forwarded to WVSU PRSSA for the project.
"Sh.I.P. Happens, It's a Real Lifesaver!" was launched March 15, 2002 at the WVSU Women's Day Retreat. A guest speaker, former Republican Senate Majority Leader Vic Sprouse, talked to the packed Student Union about Shelter in Place and held a question and answer period afterward. This was well received by the students and other members of the campus family.

Results

By March 26, 2002, the news of the student campaign had reached the West Virginia Office of Emergency Services located at the State Capitol in Charleston. Students were invited to the capitol to share the campaign in front of state and county emergency workers. At the close of the presentation the Director of WV Office of Emergency Services, arranged to have the Shelter in Place signs paid for and made by Prison Industries. A bright yellow and black metal signs bearing the Shelter-In-Place Logo was placed at every entrance on the WVSU campus. This donation amounted to $2,000 of the campaign's budget.

Students submitted stories for print and made appearances on Talk Radio, the Cable Access Channel and a local program's "State Today," earning recognition from the University administration leading to invitations to share our campaign at administrative meetings.

The student produced video: Sh.I.P. Happens, It's a Real Lifesaver was shown to the entire faculty and staff just prior to the start of spring 2003 semester. Arrangements were made for having it shown in every class at the onset of every semester.

Evaluation

Attendance by students, faculty, staff and administrators at the colleges' most popular events was a perfect tie-in for Sh.I.P. Happens campaign. Each organization that the class and PRSSA students approached was enthusiastically supportive of the campaign. They positioned the Sh.I.P. presentation in their "prime time" spot or rather, at the height of attendance at their events. Senator Sprouse was the featured speaker at the Women's Day Retreat held in the College Union during the 12:15 -1:45 p.m. time slot, a time when "no" classes are conducted. Additionally, the local celebrity country-western singer Mo Truman sang the Sh.I.P jingle before the Senator's speech and following the Q&A period. He also sang it during his morning and afternoon concert appearances. The Shi.P. presentation was duplicated at the Communication Day celebration with Sh.I.P. name tags for all attendees and life savers were placed at each table setting. Mo Truman's jingle provided background music during the 90 minute event. The college radio station WVSC 106.7FM aired the PSA jingle two to three times an hour during their standard operational hours of 1 p.m.-2 a.m. During the popular evening hours of 9 p.m.-2 a.m., the DJ's read the PSA over a Reggae, Hip Hop, jazz or R&B soundtrack of their choice. The radio station also streamed over the internet. Finally, the video was shown in all six sections of College 101 classes during two semesters. An analysis based on these sources reveals:

Sample Documents

The following pages contain several sample documents that may be used in your firm. Keep in mind -- these are suggestions for your student-run firm. Although we recommend using these documents as a guide, PRSSA or PRSA in no way requires that you use them.

Weekly Activity Reports. This report helps officers measure the successes and failures of their account projects. They also can tell officers if the account executives and individual members are doing their jobs. To fill out the report accurately, an account executive may have their account members report on a weekly basis. The University of Northern Iowa submitted this sample.

General Membership Application. All staff should receive this form when they join the firm. The form helps with creating account teams with balanced experience. It also allows members to rank projects they would like to work on and consider this when assigning staff and leadership positions in the firm. The University of Texas at Austin and Rowan University submitted these samples.

Staff Evaluation Report. Account executives complete this report to turn in to the executive board to assist in recognizing, helping or evaluating staff members on their contributions to the firm. The evaluation is for account executives. The University of Texas at Austin submitted this sample.

Portfolio. Each member of the firm should keep a portfolio of all the campaign and projects they work on. This can serve a dual purpose. It can be a method to evaluate work performed as well as provide that person a portfolio to use for future employment.

Client Evaluation. Clients complete this report to turn into the firm. This document will help the firm evaluate the services provided to clients throughout the year. The University of Florida submitted this sample.

Client Contract. This or a similar contract should be read and signed by the client and the firm director, as well as the assigned account executive before any firm/client project begins. Any legal questions or concerns should be addressed before a client is accepted. Make sure both parties have a copy of the contract. The University of Northern Iowa submitted this sample.

Pitch Letter. This is a sample pitch letter that could be given out to prospective or existing clients. The letter explains the services and capabilities of the firm. An alternative to the pitch letter may be a promotional brochure of your firm. This sample is from California State University Fullerton.

PRSSA National Documents

PRSA Member Code of Ethics. All PRSSA members should practice this code to uphold ethical behavior in their student and professional practice. A copy of this should be distributed to all students and firm members. Consider reading and discussing it at the first meeting or retreat.

National Affiliation Application. A firm must submit this application to PRSSA Headquarters to become a Nationally Affiliated Student-run Firm, as well as re-submit it every three years to remain Nationally Affiliated.

Student-run Firm Awards. Each year at National Conference, two firms are presented with Best Campaign and Best Tactic awards. This document details eligibility, deadlines and application requirements for these awards.

It is something tangible the firm director can review during the evaluation process. Your firm portfolio should include all the work of individual members on campaigns and projects. National Affiliation Application

“Credibility Through Unity”

Though there are more than 100 student-run firms around the country operated by PRSSA Chapters, only those among the upper echelons are PRSSA Nationally Affiliated. Firms with this designation have successfully gone through an application process to ensure the firm is soundly based in three areas: a solid PRSSA/PRSA connection, a high level of professionalism and an effective structure.

Earning this recognition has many benefits, including the prestige of working for a firm that represents the best of the Society and inclusion in a future client referral system. Only firms that are Nationally Affiliated will be listed on the PRSSA National website for such requests. This type of referral system will provide greater opportunities for service and meaningful work for students. Lastly, only firms that have earned National Affiliation may apply for the PRSSA Student-run Firm Awards.

To become Nationally Affiliated, a firm must abide by the standards listed below. PRSSA Headquarters does not charge an Affiliation application fee or any sort commission or fees once a firm is Affiliated.

In September 2009, National Affiliation requirements were updated to reflect the increasing number of student-run firms appearing on the Chapter level. Current Affiliated firms do not need to re-apply before the end of their three-year affiliation.

Application Requirements

To be considered for National Affiliation, firms must submit the following:

Definitions

The following is a set of terms that will be used throughout the document. Review them briefly to understand the standards listed below.

- Nationally Affiliated — Firms that have reached a new level of professionalism and status among PRSSA student-run firms by meeting specific, official standards.
- Core values — The three basic principles of PRSSA student-run firms: connection, professionalism and structure.
- Standards — A practical and measurable requirement a firm must meet to become a PRSSA Nationally Affiliated student-run firm. Each of the core values is broken into standards.
- Firm executive board — The firm director, two assistants and adviser.
- Firm adviser — A professional or faculty member who guides the practice and administration of the firm. He or she may be the current PRSSA Chapter Faculty Adviser of Professional Adviser; however, we highly recommended that the adviser be a separate public relations professional who will focus solely on the success of the firm.
- Active PRSA member — To be an active PRSA member, an individual must have current paid dues and periodically participate in PRSA activities. The number of times the firm adviser participates to be called “active” is a personal decision of the firm adviser.

Recommended Firm Standards

Although firms vary in size and scope, the standards below were designed to help each firm move toward greater professionalism and competency. These standards are minimum requirements and firms are encouraged to exceed them as they are able.

Below are listed the standards that make up each core value of National Affiliation, as well as examples of how a firm can meet these standards. To become Nationally Affiliated, a firm must show that it meets each standard, but it does not need to meet the specific examples listed here. For instance, a firm must show that it is PRSSA Centered to become Nationally Affiliated, but it does not specifically have to send one member to Conference each year.

Connection

Standard: PRSSA Centered

Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:

- All members of the firm's leadership are PRSSA members.
- It is highly recommended that the staff members should be involved with the PRSSA Chapter, however it is not required.
- The firm sends at least one individual to the PRSSA National Conference each year.
- Every three years, the firm re-applies to be a PRSSA Nationally Affiliated Student-run Firm by completing the application and sending it to PRSSA Headquarters.

Standard: PRSA Connected

Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:

- The firm adviser is an active PRSA member.
- The firm adviser meets with each individual firm members at least once a year to provide direction and counsel regarding the student's professional goals.
- The firm's executive board meets with it's a PRSA Chapter executive board annually to report on the firm's work. This meeting, in-person or through conferencing, should be attended by a PRSA Chapter executive board member and at least two other PRSA members, as well as a member of the firm's executive board and at least two other account executives. The most important part of the meeting occurs as PRSA provides feedback to the firm.

Standard: Professional and Faculty Support

Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:

Public relations practitioners and faculty members are actively supporting the firm through counseling the firm's management, reviewing the firm's work or providing clients to work with.

Standard: Accountable

Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:

- Account executives report consistently to the firm's executive board through written and oral reports. The nature and design of these reports may vary according to each firm's needs. However, the key is to report consistently. This ensures that the client is well served and that all associates are participating (see more under "Outcome-driven").
- Once a year, the adviser to the firm should conduct at least one three-minute interview with each member. This interview does not have to be long and extensive, but it should be similar to an annual review process conducted in business with employees. While some firms may want their account executives to conduct these interviews, it is important for the firm members to have at least one short interview — even if it is three-minutes — with the firm director.

- The firm requests that all clients complete some type of questionnaire and return it to the firm at the end of the semester. Each firm may create their own questionnaire that will provide them with the information they need to improve. This will provide feedback to the firm and an opportunity to showcase to future clients those things the firm did well.

Standard: Outcome-driven
Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:
- In all written and oral reports, the focus is on the impact made with the client. As time passes, technology will advance causing the means of communication to continually change. For that reason, the review process is designed to measure results rather than methods, strategies or tactics. Students must know how they are affecting real change.
- Program planning systematically uses the research, action, communication and evaluation (RACE) model, or a similar system, in meeting the clients' needs.

Standard: Ethically-based
Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:
- The firm has a written commitment to follow the PRSA Code of Ethics.
- All members receive basic instruction and sign a commitment to follow the code and behave ethically at all times.
- Any member who is found to be dishonest in his or her reporting to supervisors or clients will be dismissed from the firm.

Standard: Geared toward professional practice
Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:
- The firm's executive board provides clear, written expectations and deadlines for the account associates at the beginning of each school semester or term.
- Account associates sign the written expectations at the beginning of each semester or term, certifying their understanding of the firm's expectations.
- The account executives communicate the deadlines they set with their clients to the firm's executive board each semester or term.
- The executive board maintains a database of all the account deadlines and projects. This way, the board can serve the accounts in helping them keep their commitments to the clients.
- Professional conduct dominates the firm's atmosphere; this includes being on time for all meetings with clients and professionals.

Structure
Standard: Organized and structured
Examples of how a firm demonstrates this standard:
- The firm has a documented mission statement to guide all organizational activities.
- The firm has a well-organized and written structure similar to a professional agency (i.e. account executives, account associates, etc.).
- The structure includes, at the minimum, a firm director and two assistant directors. Other positions may include treasurer, public relations director or any other position as needed by the individual firm.

- The firm serves at least three clients, with three students working together to meet each client's needs. This is a minimum standard, but the firm must ensure that at least three students are assigned to each client.
- The firm uses a set of contracts and a defined system of billing for all clients.
- The written structure of the organization has been approved in writing by the adviser and included in the PRSSA three-year review process.

Student-Run Firm Awards

The PRSSA Student-run Firm Awards recognize the top public relations work done by Nationally Affiliated Student-run Firms during the academic year. To be eligible, a campaign or tactic must have been implemented at least in part between June 2016 and May 2017. Entries tend to have better chances of winning near their completion, when evaluation against initial objectives can be measured. For a student-run firm to be eligible, it must have current National Affiliation status. If your firm is not yet affiliated but you wish to apply for this award, become eligible by applying for National Affiliation by June 1, 2017 and being approved before the award application deadline.

To apply for a PRSSA Student-run Firm Award for Best Campaign or Best Tactic, submit the following:

- Three-page Summary. This concise summary is the most important part of your entry and should give the judges a thorough view of the complete campaign or tactic. For best campaign, the summary should cover research, planning, execution and evaluation, and may include a situation analysis, research, goals, objectives, strategies, tactics and results. For best tactic, judges will evaluate your entry in four key areas — planning/content, creativity/quality, results and technical excellence (where applicable). Your summary should describe your measurable objectives, target audiences, budget and any other information specific to the tactic. Qualitative and quantitative results should show how you met the stated measurable objectives and how the entry impacted the success of a broader program.
- Samples. If you are applying for best campaign, submit samples of work created to support the overall objectives of the campaign. Samples may include research data, collateral materials, schedules, photographs and videos. If you are applying for best tactic, enclose a sample of the tactic. If a tactic or campaign element is online or video, include screen shots or printouts in addition to links or video files. Do not assume judges will have computer access.
- 100-word Description. Include a 100-word description of your program. The description will be used to explain your entry if it receives the Best Campaign award.
- Application Form. Your application form can be downloaded online at www.prssa.org and must be typed.

Entries must be letter-size, with at least a 10-point font and 1" margins. Entries will be accepted in PDF format, with accompanying files labeled and well organized in a zip folder. Hard-copy entries may be bound no larger than 10.5" x 12" and binders should be no more than 3" wide.

Submit your entry via email to jessica.espinal@prsa.org or by mail to the address below.
PRSSA Student-run Firm Awards, 33 Maiden Lane, 11th Floor, New York, NY 10038-5150

All entries must be received by Sept. 12, 2017, not just postmarked. Winners will be announced at the PRSSA 2017 National Conference and receive a certificate.
