THE REVOLUTION CONTINUES
PRSSA 2017 NATIONAL CONFERENCE

REGISTRATION DEADLINE: SEPT. 8. REGISTER EARLY. SPACE IS LIMITED.
WELCOME TO BOSTON

Boston is one of the oldest cities in the United States and offers visitors a rich history. Despite the city’s historic architecture and cobblestone streets, Boston continues to be a center of innovation.

Boston maintains much of its history since its founding in 1630. For those who wish to travel back in time, there are Freedom Trail walking tours, visits to Faneuil Hall and tours of Fenway Park.

Home to 35 colleges and universities, Boston is a hub for students and young professionals alike. With some of the nation’s top health care facilities and brands, Boston is a beacon for revolutionary thinkers and doers.

Enjoy the mix of old and new in Boston while taking a stroll down Newbury Street, Boston’s famed street of high-end boutiques and restaurants, or exploring Downtown Crossing, where modern shops and the historic theater district collide.
LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL PRESIDENT

On behalf of the entire PRSSA 2017–2018 National Committee, I am thrilled to invite you to the PRSSA 2017 National Conference in Boston. The National Conference is the largest gathering of public relations students in the country and provides members with the opportunity to network, learn and grow as young professionals.

As always, the Conference is held at the same time as the PRSA International Conference, which is conveniently located just down the street at the Boston Marriott Copley Place. As an attendee, you will have the opportunity to attend the PRSA General Sessions led by speakers such as Oscar-nominated film director Morgan Spurlock, and connect with professionals from around the globe.

I sincerely hope you consider joining us in Boston to take advantage of all the Conference has to offer. Over the span of five days you will have the chance to experience professional and Chapter development sessions, visit the Conference’s Career Development Exhibition and attend the annual Awards Ceremony while also spending time exploring “America’s Walking City.” Make no mistake about it, attending National Conference is one of the best investments you can make toward launching a successful career, and the memories you make will last a lifetime. I can’t wait to meet you in Boston.

Andrew Cook
PRSSA 2017–2018 National President

LETTER FROM THE CONFERENCE COMMITTEE

Join us in Boston, the host city of the PRSSA 2017 National Conference, for a weekend of professional development, networking and exploring. We hope you will join us to learn more about how the revolution in our industry continues.

Make sure to take advantage of all that Conference has to offer this year. Register for agency tours and attend the PRSA 2017 International Conference General Sessions at the Boston Marriott Copley Place.

This year’s program will feature speakers from diverse sectors of the public relations industry. Conference will give you the opportunity to make valuable professional connections and learn a lot about the public relations profession.

We look forward to seeing you in Boston!

Amanda Howard, Rebecca Stone, Carly Gibson and Rachel McLean
PRSSA 2017 National Conference Committee

GENERAL INFORMATION

Wardrobe
Attendees should dress in business attire for all Conference sessions (which includes modest blouses, suits, slacks, ties and dresses — jeans and shorts are not acceptable). Casual clothing such as a sports jersey and/or hat is encouraged for the Opening Night Celebration on Friday. The Awards Dinner on Monday evening is business formal.

Please keep in mind that the weather in Boston can be a bit unpredictable. The average temperature is between 45 and 65 degrees. Attendees should pack for the varying conditions.

Etiquette
National Conference is a professional event. Attendees are expected to represent themselves, their schools and the Society in a professional manner. This includes dressing appropriately for events and limiting alcohol consumption as necessary.

Chapter Roll Call
Represent your school's Chapter at the Saturday morning Chapter Roll Call. As the PRSSA National President announces your Chapter, have a cheer, chant or song prepared that lets everyone know you have arrived. Be creative and have fun with it! Please remember to dress in business attire, as this event is held in conjunction with the keynote address.

Hospitality Desk
Meet Conference volunteers to help you navigate the hotel and Conference events as well as where to go and what to see in Boston. Volunteers will be prepared to advise you on restaurants, nightlife and local attractions throughout the city.

Special Needs
Contact PRSSA Headquarters at (212) 460-1474 or email prssa@prsa.org as soon as possible if you have any special needs including but not limited to dietary or health considerations. PRSSA Headquarters will accommodate requests whenever possible.

Sports Public Relations
Just like trying out for the major leagues, the competition for landing a job in the sports industry is higher than ever. Gone are the days where public relations professionals are required to simply communicate with fans. The strategies, methods and tools for fan engagement have revolutionized. Public relations practitioners must now be able to create the same magic off the field, as professional athletes do on the field. Whether driving personal brands that connect with fans, or giving consumers an inside look at an athlete’s or team’s personality, demonstrating your ability to generate value in this business is essential.

Nikki Barjon, Global Strategist, Branding and Communications, The Barjon Group

The Transformation of PR
From the days of Edward Bernays, the field of public relations has evolved far beyond the original press release. With the developments in technology and society, public relations has adapted itself to communicate in more unique ways than Bernays ever could have imagined. Social media alone has revolutionized the way companies and organizations reach their publics, and has changed public relations forever. While the old ways have not left, the transformation of public relations has invigorated our industry.

Mike Fernandez, US CEO, Burson-Marstellar

Heartbeat Heard ’round the World:
PR Is Nonprofit’s Lifeline
Do you have what it takes to make a difference in the world? How can public relations take a nonprofit from local to global? “Going viral” translates into real outcomes for nonprofit organizations. Telling authentic and heartfelt stories is key, but evoking emotion to further an organization’s mission requires an expert’s touch. Gain a better understanding of nonprofit communications including the skills and abilities needed to thrive in a dynamic industry and the keys to successful campaigns for any organization.

Mary Klemenok, Senior Public Relations Student, LSU Manship School of Mass Communication
Lori Steele, Community Educator, Louisiana Organ Procurement Agency
Kirsten Heintz, Director of Marketing and Communications, Louisiana Organ Procurement Agency

Message in Motion: Visual Storytelling
If a picture is worth a thousand words, how many is a video worth? With visual storytelling through video, the communications industry has gained a medium that can convey a widespread message. Video has become an impactful tool for companies to captivate and communicate with hard-to-reach audiences.

Ian Cohen, Global Executive Producer and President, Content Creation and Innovation, Weber Shandwick
2:50–3:50 p.m.
Find Your #PRStrong
In the field of communications, it may seem as if there are a million paths to pursue. What is important is to find the path that empowers and excites you every day. In this session, learn to find your strong by working hard, adapting and growing.
Sharon Barbano, Vice President of Public Relations and Events, Saucony Inc.

Inbound Marketing: Bringing the Customer to You
As a consumer, it can sometimes feel like there is an endless stream of content to sort through. The challenge as a communicator is to ensure your audience benefits from your content rather than being overwhelmed by it. Inbound marketing targets individuals in your audience by following their habits and behaviors. It allows communicators to target consumers with relevant content and measure campaign success.
Meghan Keaney Anderson, Vice President of Marketing, HubSpot

Navigating Fake News
In a world where headlines are constantly contested, it can be hard to sort out the legitimate news sources. Keeping up on current events and being informed individuals is important for being successful communicators. This session will teach you real news from fake news and which sources you can trust to tell you what you need to know.
Thomas Fiedler, Dean of Students, College of Communication, Boston University
Moderator: John Carroll, Professor, Boston University

Tips From New Professionals
We all know that our careers are knocking on the door. Learn from new professionals who aspired to the same goals we have and found success in their field. In an evolving industry, it is always helpful to hear some words of wisdom from those who have walked before you and have sat in your seats not so long ago. Hosted by the New Professionals Section.
Laura Daronatsy Fooks, Communications LDP Associate, Lockheed Martin
Chad Furst, Communications Senior Consultant, Booz Allen Hamilton
Andrea Gils, Marketing and Communications Manager, University of Kentucky International Center
Veronica Mingrone, Digital Analyst, Canvas Blue

4:10–5:10 p.m.
Beyond the PR Stunt:
Creativity in PR Jobs You Didn’t Know Existed
If you judged public relations based on the TV portrayal of publicists, you might think we spend our nights at fashion shows and our mornings breaking World Records in Times Square. But there is so much more to public relations than red carpets, stunts and tweets. From health public relations to music and food publicity, the public relations world is huge and full of agencies and accounts that tap into your interests and passions. If you’re graduating with a public relations degree and looking to figure out the lay of the land, join Michael DiSalvo to learn why not all public relations is created equally, how you can have a public relations job that you love, and maybe find creativity where you least expect it.
Michael DiSalvo, Vice President, Healthcare, Ogilvy

How to Land a Career in PR
Join The George Washington University’s Strategic Public Relations Program and PRSSA for a panel on how to obtain a career in public relations, communications or public affairs. The panel will feature alumis, industry leaders and masters at finding the perfect job. They will speak about their career path, GW’s role in their career advancement and how they built their professional network.
Whitney Gray Bailer, Communications Consultant, Croplife America
Alexa Manocchio, Manager of Regional Communications, Fidelity Investments
Aaron Pickering, Vice President of Corporate Communications and Responsibility, Cone Communications
Moderator: Larry Parnell, Program Director, Strategic Public Relations, George Washington University

Let’s Get Ethical: Interactive Panel
Ethics, in any field, is an integral part of being a successful professional. It is important to operate ethically in the workplace among peers and in the public while communicating your organization’s message. Communication professionals hold the power and potential to reach large audiences, therefore we must think carefully about our methods of communication and the impact of our message.
Ray Kotcher, Fellow PRSA, Boston University
Don Wright, Ph.D., APR, Fellow PRSA, Boston University

The Social Age
One of the biggest ways Public Relations has revolutionized is through the integration and utilization of social media mediums. From Facebook to Twitter, social media has changed the interaction between customer and company. This has created a need for professionals who specialize in this style of communication.
Jason Rentner, Director of Digital and Social Media, Pro Football Hall of Fame

Communicating in Style: Fashion Public Relations
Fashion is a part of every culture, as it is a means for individuals to express their personal taste. When communicating on behalf of a larger label, you must consider the diverse consumers of fashion including magazine journalists, models, everyday fashionistas and more. Learn the stylized lingo of the fashion industry in this session.
Sharifa Murdock, Co-Founder, Liberty Fairs

General Motors Session
General Motors prides its brand on revolutionary thinking, and has done so for the past 100 years. GM has maintained a successful history in the industry because it does not settle on the ordinary, and consistently exceed expectations by remaining innovative. To uphold its brand is to keep customers for life and constantly communicate with them.
Speaker TBD

Surviving Year One: The Realities of Joining the World of PR
Every day, millennials are challenging marketers to think beyond spending power, reach and impressions. They’re challenging the public relations industry to stand for something — to embody a brand’s hopes and dreams. This session will dive into a concept Nebo holds dear and is striving to embody every day — the power and potential of the industry in the age of millennials.
Laura Vellidis, PR Specialist, Nebo Agency

Celebrity Focused Public Relations
Celebrities can quantum leap a public relations campaign, but only if you have an authentic match. Whether you end up working in entertainment public relations, in the corporate world or in another communications environment, it is likely that you will at some point be involved with engaging a celebrity or other influencer. Knowing how to make the right matches and what to do after they say “yes” can make or break your campaign. Learn insider secrets from an entertainment public relations ninja who has seen it all.
Rita Tateel, President, The Celebrity Source
11 a.m.–12 p.m.

Sticking to the Brand
In our fast-paced world, it is important for companies to maintain a consistent image and a central message for their brand. It can be tricky to stay trendy and modern, but proper branding creates a company identity and separates it in the industry. In this session, professionals share their experiences on how they succeeded in building their company’s brand by producing unique, high-quality campaigns.

Jonathan Yohannan, Director of PR, Panera Bread

Pitching With Passion
Press releases and media pitches are still relevant to the public relations field today. Now, with countless forms of media, it is imperative to be strategic about where to pitch, and to pitch with intention and passion. In today’s media climate, a simple write-up is not enough — originality is key and passion is essential.

Adam Ritchie, CEO and Founder, Adam Ritchie Brand Direction

Superhero Spokesperson
An organization’s spokesperson can save the day in any bad situation and can build a positive face for a brand. This is not always the easiest of tasks and must be done very strategic, therefore it is important to know the do’s and don’ts when it comes to selecting and training a valuable spokesperson. With a deep understanding for a brand and enthusiasm, a spokesperson is vital to any communications team.

Dr. Joseph V. Trahan III, APR, Fellow PRSA, President and CEO, Trahan & Associates

Capital of Communication:
Mastering Political Public Relations
With such a topical presidential election, there is a growing interest in the political communication industry. Politics is proving to be an ever-evolving field, and it is important to know the industry and the unique set of skills required to be a successful political communicator.

Michel DeFilippis, Program Manager, Direct Impact
Elizabeth Guyton, Communications Director, Massachusetts Governor’s Office

12:30–2:30 p.m.

PRSA General Session
Morgan Spurlock will deliver what he modestly calls, “The Greatest Lecture Ever Presented.” Utilizing the cutting-edge tools of comic exploration and total self-exploitation, he dissects the world of advertising and marketing by using his personal integrity as currency to sell out to the highest bidder. Scathingly funny, subversive and deceptively smart, Spurlock shines the definitive light on our branded future.
